HAMILTON RESERVOIR PARK

Our First Pleasure Point

But the picnicker is an pleasure-seeker and must needs be led to the summit. A five cent fare from the city reaches Bergen's park just beyond the junction of the electric and steam roads. For many people have imagined that this [illegible] spot is closed to the public. It is not, and there is no more desirable spot anywhere for the most little picnic party than without a mile. Not only is it [illegible] beautiful, with its well-kept walks, seats and flower beds and [illegible] great artificial lake of purest water, pumped from the depths of Lake Ontario, miles away, but from its level a grand view of the valley below, the famous Hamilton Bay and Beach, and Lake Ontario itself stretches before the eyes. An ideal spot for the picnic party well worth the visit of the stranger, and within easy and [illegible] economic distance. The attendants at the park, all employees of the city, are most courteous and glad to show you the working of the waterworks system as it is operated from that point. The working of the great standpipe used in case of fire is an interesting operation and one that will interest all lovers of mechanics and engineering. The standpipe is [illegible] the [illegible]
